Notes

The Dangerous Migration is a tone poem for chamber ensemble illustrating the various childhood stories of my maternal Grandmother during the Korean War. During my own childhood in the States, I have fond memories of my family visiting my maternal Grandparents in South Korea during summer breaks and my Grandmother especially, will recall many of her youth experiences during the war and the devastating aftermath she and her family had to go through.

The tone poem follows a specifically organised chain of events. The piece begins where we are put immediately into the war zone as my Grandmother being born in the northern parts of what is now North Korea, her family begins their dangerous migration towards the south as the war breaks out. She recalls chaos, loudness, madness around her but the adults doing their best to keep the children calm and in strict orderly fashion during the journey. An ostinato-like figure first introduced by the Piano is to represent the ongoing battlefield as it is tossed around all instruments within the ensemble while various other playing techniques illustrate what one would see in a war zone. Bullets flying represented by fast trumpet tonguings and trombone glissandos, an air raid siren imitated by a Viola, dust and particles illustrated with short staccato notes by the Piccolo to name a few. In the midst of all chaos, we are briefly introduced with a choir-like passage first by the winds and then strings to showcase the calm but anxious movements of the family.

As the war zone reaches its climactic explosion, the atmosphere calms down as her family finally arrives at what is now Gunsan, South Korea. She recalls many small memories during their refuge from the exhaustion of migration to innocent children playing among themselves, constantly hearing the American soldiers train and hesitantly approaching them to try and understand their language, playing innocent games with the soldiers and being part of many various frugal but exciting activities are some of the stories my Grandmother would recite time and time again.

The piece then suddenly changes atmosphere with a 'shock' by the Piano to signal the aftermath of the Korean War and the "devastation, destruction, despair, depression, desolation" that comes along with it. Having chosen many of these vocabulary to portray such scene that start with the letter 'D', the Piano is tasked with producing the lowest 'D' note throughout by striking the string with the palm of the hand. Other instruments join in with other various 'D' notes but very sparingly and hesitantly. Towards the end, the piece becomes a trudging procession as the Piano gives a steady beat throughout. Strings representing the final migration towards nowhere, winds representing the depression of the people, while the Bass Drum walks irregularly throughout the procession. As the procession disappears, the winds have the last choir-like passage to perhaps wish upon a glimmer of hope towards a possible bright future ahead...

This page of a musical score is divided into two systems. The first system includes staves for Flute & Piccolo, B♭ Clarinet, Trumpet in B♭, Bass Trombone, Percussion (Cym. (Tri. beater), Bongos, Congas), Piano, Violin 1, Violin 2, Viola, and Cello. The second system includes staves for Piccolo, Clarinet, Trumpet, Bass Trombone, Percussion, Piano, Violin 1, Violin 2, Viola, and Cello. The score is written in 4/4 time and features a variety of musical notations, including dynamics (e.g., f, pp, sf, ff), articulations (e.g., gliss., flutter, pizz.), and performance instructions (e.g., non tremolo, arco, molto cresc.). The piano part is particularly prominent, with complex rhythmic patterns and dynamic markings.
